

You might be a Redneck Alaskan Guy if.....

You are vacationing in Hawaii when a beautiful woman in a bikini walks by and you think, "Boy! I'd sure like to see her in a snowmachine suit."

You can see the road through the floorboard of your pickup truck.

You have ever called an 800 number you found in a catalog and then were told, "Alaska? Oh, we don't ship to foreign countries."

You have ever put up with the pain of a toothache until the Permanent Fund checks come out.

You have ever worn a tie with waders.

You have learned to never say to your kids, "Be home by dark."

You know bunny boots aren't worn by bunnies or made out of bunnies.

You take off your shirt and your arms are as pale as your legs all the way to your wrists.

You know that the term "breakup" has more to do with the weather than personal relationships.

Your monthly Alascom phone bill is larger than your trailer payment.

You don't know anyone that doesn't own a 4-wheeler.

You are driving down the road and your wife, instead of saying, "Darling, please watch for the next service station," says, "Pull Over, I've gotta pee"

You have ever washed your car while there was still snow on the ground.

You have more recipes on how to cook salmon than you have salmon.

You keep a roll of toilet paper behind the truck seat.

You know that "Rat-net" is not a rodent catching device.

You know the Naknek twitch is an illegal fishing technique, not a spasmodic muscle in your neck.

You learned to swim indoors.

You leave your Christmas lights up, year round, because as soon as it gets warm enough to take them down it starts getting cold again.

Your bedroom windows are covered with aluminum foil.

Your monthly veterinarian bill is more than your own medical bills.

You ever drove a highway in which you had to prove you had money.

You think it's normal for a town to put all the businesses on one side of the road.
